Ohio River bridge inspection this week

BY MARK CAMPBELL

The Milton-Madison bridge will undergo a routine annual inspection this week but no lane closures are expected and impact to traffic should be minimal.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KTC) announced the inspection of the US 421 Ohio River bridge last week to begin on Tuesday, June 1 and continue through Friday, June 4.

Inspectors from a consultant engineering firm will perform the assessment of the structure between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily. However, inclement weather or other unforeseen delays could affect the dates and duration of the work, the KTC said.

The 40-foot-wide bridge, a continuous truss span constructed off site, delivered to Milton, Kentucky, and then assembled on site next to the former 20-foot-wide bridge at that location, opened in 2014 at a cost of $103 million. The former bridge, opened in 1929, was then demolished using explosives and the new span was slid into place on upgraded piers.

Unlike the old bridge, the design of the new span allows most inspection work to be conducted without impacting traffic through a series of service walkways under the deck of the bridge.

An estimated 3,500 vehicles use the Milton-Madison bridge daily as the only Ohio River crossing between Markland Dam near Vevay upstream and the Lewis and Clark bridge connecting Louisville, near Prospect, Kentucky, to southern Indiana, near Utica, Indiana, downstream.

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Sunrise Golf Course will begin a major transition this week with the departure of longtime PGA professional Jeff Bridgford and the changes that will be coming to the pro shop and grill prior to when Madison names its next golf pro later this summer.

Bridgford and the city reached a mutually acceptable separation agreement last month that will see him step down after 26 years at Sunrise and the city hire a new golf pro in a process that will also involve renovating the clubhouse and adding services like alcohol sales and pursuing additional events at the 18-hole municipal.

"Our goal is to create a marketing presence that will encourage more play," Mayor Bob Courtney said Sunday. "We will do so by coordinating with area hospitality and tourism partners, develop corporate relationships, expand memberships, and create a sense of destination development with the course."

Courtney noted that by the city having "complete control over its golf course" for the first time in decades — previous golf pro Bob Rusk has a similar tenure — the city plans to make several changes that include refreshing the clubhouse, reopening the grill, hiring a new PGA golf professional, offering new services like alcohol sales, event opportunities and promoting the course across the region.

"The changes planned by the city along with a better focus on operations is intended to cultivate new players and reduce operating deficits that have brought decline to the entire park system," he said.

As part of that change, the golf course grill will close this week for remodeling but the pro shop and course will remain open. Tee times also can be reserved through the city's website at www.madison-in.gov.

"Our hope is to get this done as quickly as possible because we have several events coming up," Courtney said. "We hope to have the grill reopened and the new pro hired within two weeks."

Regional Briefs

From wire reports

Copper recycler coming to Shelby

SHELBYVILLE, Ky. — A copper recycling company is building a new $100 million facility in Shelby County and plans to hire 75 workers.

Wieland North America will begin building the facility in October. The plant will melt copper and copper alloy, according to a news release from Kentucky Gov. Andy Beshear's office.

The German company earlier this year announced plans to locate its new North American headquarters in Louisville.

"As a 200-year-old company highly focused on long-term business sustainability, we intend to make positive impacts here for many years to come," Matt Bedingfield, president of Recycling for Wieland North America, said in the release.

Kentucky has about 230 metals-related facilities that employ about 25,000 workers, the governor's office said.

Distiller announces KSU scholarship

SHELBYVILLE, Ky. — A Kentucky whiskey maker has announced a $25,000 annual scholarship for Kentucky State University's master of agriculture sciences in environmental studies program.

Bulleit Frontier Whiskey hopes to promote diversity in the industry with the gift to the historically Black university, the company said in a news release.

The scholarship is on top of a $10 million commitment that parent company Diageo North America announced earlier this year. That money is to be used to fund permanent endowments at 25 historically Black colleges and universities. Kentucky State received $1 million of that donation, the largest in the school's history, the Bulleit release said.

The Bulleit grant will provide $25,000 to support students in the program annually for the next five years.

"With this partnership we're helping remove a financial barrier that prevents students from getting across the finish line," Kentucky State President M. Christopher Brown II said.

Federal courthouses relax mask, social distancing rules

INDIANAPOLIS — Fully vaccinated individuals will be allowed to enter public areas of the four courthouses of the federal Southern District of Indiana without wearing a face covering or observing social distancing.

It says members of the public who are not fully vaccinated still must wear face coverings and practice social distancing throughout the courthouses. An exception may be made for someone providing documentation that they are unable, for medical reasons, to wear a face covering.

A fully vaccinated individual is defined by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention as anyone two weeks after receiving the second shot of a two-dose vaccine series or two weeks after receiving a single-dose vaccine.

Agencies located in the courthouses can set face covering and social distancing policies in their own spaces. Judges have the authority to determine such policies in their courtrooms and chambers.

To provide jurors peace of mind, all vaccinated and non-vaccinated persons summoned for jury duty and court staff interacting with them must wear face coverings and adhere to social distancing requirements while in areas designated for jurors.

SUNRISE

Sunrise Golf Course has operated at more than a $300,000 deficit in recent years due in large part to a fee structure set by the city that did not cover expenses despite 26,000 rounds played at the course in 2020 and by employing year-around maintenance staffing for what Courtney described as seasonal work. Last month the city increased fees, made adjustments in staffing and approved alcohol sales at the course with hopes that the Sunrise can break even or make a profit and free up more tax dollars for improvements to other parks in the city.

"We have already restructured how the course operates and identified new revenue sources that will create a long-term sustainable operation that will eliminate taxpayer dependency," Courtney said. "This will allow us to invest in all our parks more effectively. Change is never easy so we ask for the community's support as we implement these new strategies."

David Kummer: Everything, Somewhere

June 9 — 5 p.m.

at Madison Public Library

Local author David Kummer will discuss his newly-released fictional work, "Everything, Somewhere," in which you will recognize the city of Madison. D. Donovan, senior reviewer, Midwest Book Review writes, "A small town replete with secrets and coming-of-age experiences juxtaposed with old age choices ... Everything, Somewhere takes a satisfying journey both sentimental and dangerous. It walks the avenues of mental illness and health, as well as incorporating a newfound conviction that, somewhere out there, there are answers. Its delightful twists and turns challenge its characters and invite readers to think about life's trajectory and its ultimate course." Following the author talk, Q and A, and book signing, Kummer will continue the discussion at Village Lights Bookstore, 110 East Main Street, Madison at 6 p.m., where copies of "Everything, Somewhere" are available for purchase.

CLASS 3A BASEBALL SECTIONAL

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

SELLERSBURG — Not even a rain delay, unseasonably cold weather and wind or even a pitch count controversy could keep Madison from its date with the sectional championship game as the Cubs knocked off Salem 6-2 in the semifinals at Silver Creek High School on Friday.

But none of that mattered. Madison withstood the adversity — as well as a late Salem rally — to take aim for its first sectional crown since 2009.

"I thought our bats were better tonight, we did a lot of good things defensively and I thought Drew threw a good game," Madison coach Tim Armstrong said. "We got to play, we got the win and we get to go and play again on Monday."

Like in its sectional-opening win on Monday, the Cubs scored early, turning a walk to Drew Forner to lead off the bottom of the first and singles by Ben Orrill, Zach Forner and Keegan Clement into a quick 2-0 lead.

Madison (20-10) played add-on from there, getting two more runs in the third on RBI singles by Clement and Colin Yancey and two more in the fourth thanks to back-to-back sacrifice flies from Orrill and Zach Forner for a 6-0 lead.

Those runs were more than enough for the younger Forner, who cruised through six innings, running into trouble only once in the third when he stranded two runners in scoring position. As it turned out, only a pitch count could drive him from the game.

Forner was his own worst enemy in the seventh. He walked the first batter, Parker Boulet, who then went to second on a wild pitch. Forner then got Trape Howard to ground out to first base, but Forner, taking the throw at the bag, attempted to nail Boulet advancing to third and instead threw the ball into foul territory and Boulet walked home with the Lions' first run.

Forner regrouped to strike out the next batter for the second out, but an infield single, a catcher's interference call and another single loaded the bases.

Forner delivered his first pitch to the next batter, Payton Arthur, for a ball when Salem questioned Forner's pitch count. Under IHSAA rules, no pitcher is allowed to throw more than 120 pitches in a game and although Madison had Forner with 119, Salem had the hurler with 122 while Silver Creek officials scoring the game had the count at 121. A pitcher is allowed to finish an at-bat as long as they start the at-bat with less than 120 pitches.

After a lengthy discussion and delay it was decided to go with Silver Creek's number and Forner was forced from the mound. Armstrong then turned to freshman Liam Murphy to nail down the final out.

After two more delays as Salem attempted to slow the down the game, Murphy finally went to work and walked Arthur to force in the second run. But the lefty then popped up the next batter to end the game.

"That was a tough situation for Liam to come into and I thought he did a good job," Armstrong said. "Drew was really cruising there and then came that play at first where we were just a little over-zealous and over-confident. Take the out and allow the runner to go to third and concentrate on getting the next batter. But we're still young and that will come with experience."

Drew Forner (6-3) ended up allowing one earned run on six hits in six and two-thirds innings with 11 strikeouts and two walks. Murphy got credit for his third save of the season after working a third of an inning.

Drew Forner was also 2-for-3 at the plate with a double and a run scored. Clement was 2-for-3 with two RBIs and a run, Zach Forner had a hit, drove in two runs and scored one, and Zander Vonch had a hit.

Madison advances to the sectional championship where it will take on No. 8 Silver Creek (22-8) on Monday afternoon. Because of Madison Courier deadlines, coverage of that game will be published in Thursday's edition.

CLASS 1A BASEBALL SECTIONAL

BY JORDAN BEAR

CAMPBELLSBURG — Shawe scored first but West Washington countered that with nine-unanswered runs to post a 9-1 win in the semifinals of the Class 1A Baseball Sectional at West Washington on Friday night.

After rain earlier resulted in hours of field maintenance, it was close to 10:30 p.m. Friday before the Hilltoppers and Senators took the field as the second game of the day and nearly 12:30 a.m. Saturday by conclusion of the game.

Despite the late start, Shawe started off well. A hit batter, a walk, and a balk in the first inning set the table for Hunter Kennett to drive in a run on an RBI groundout for a 1-0 Hilltoppers lead.

However, things didn't go as smoothly in the bottom half of the inning. Kennett, Shawe's starting pitcher, managed to notch just one before the Senators pushed ahead with five runs.

That momentum, combined with brutal cold and windy weather on top of damp field conditions, conspired to keep Shawe from threatening the rest of the way. Meanwhile, West Washington added to its lead to win 9-1.

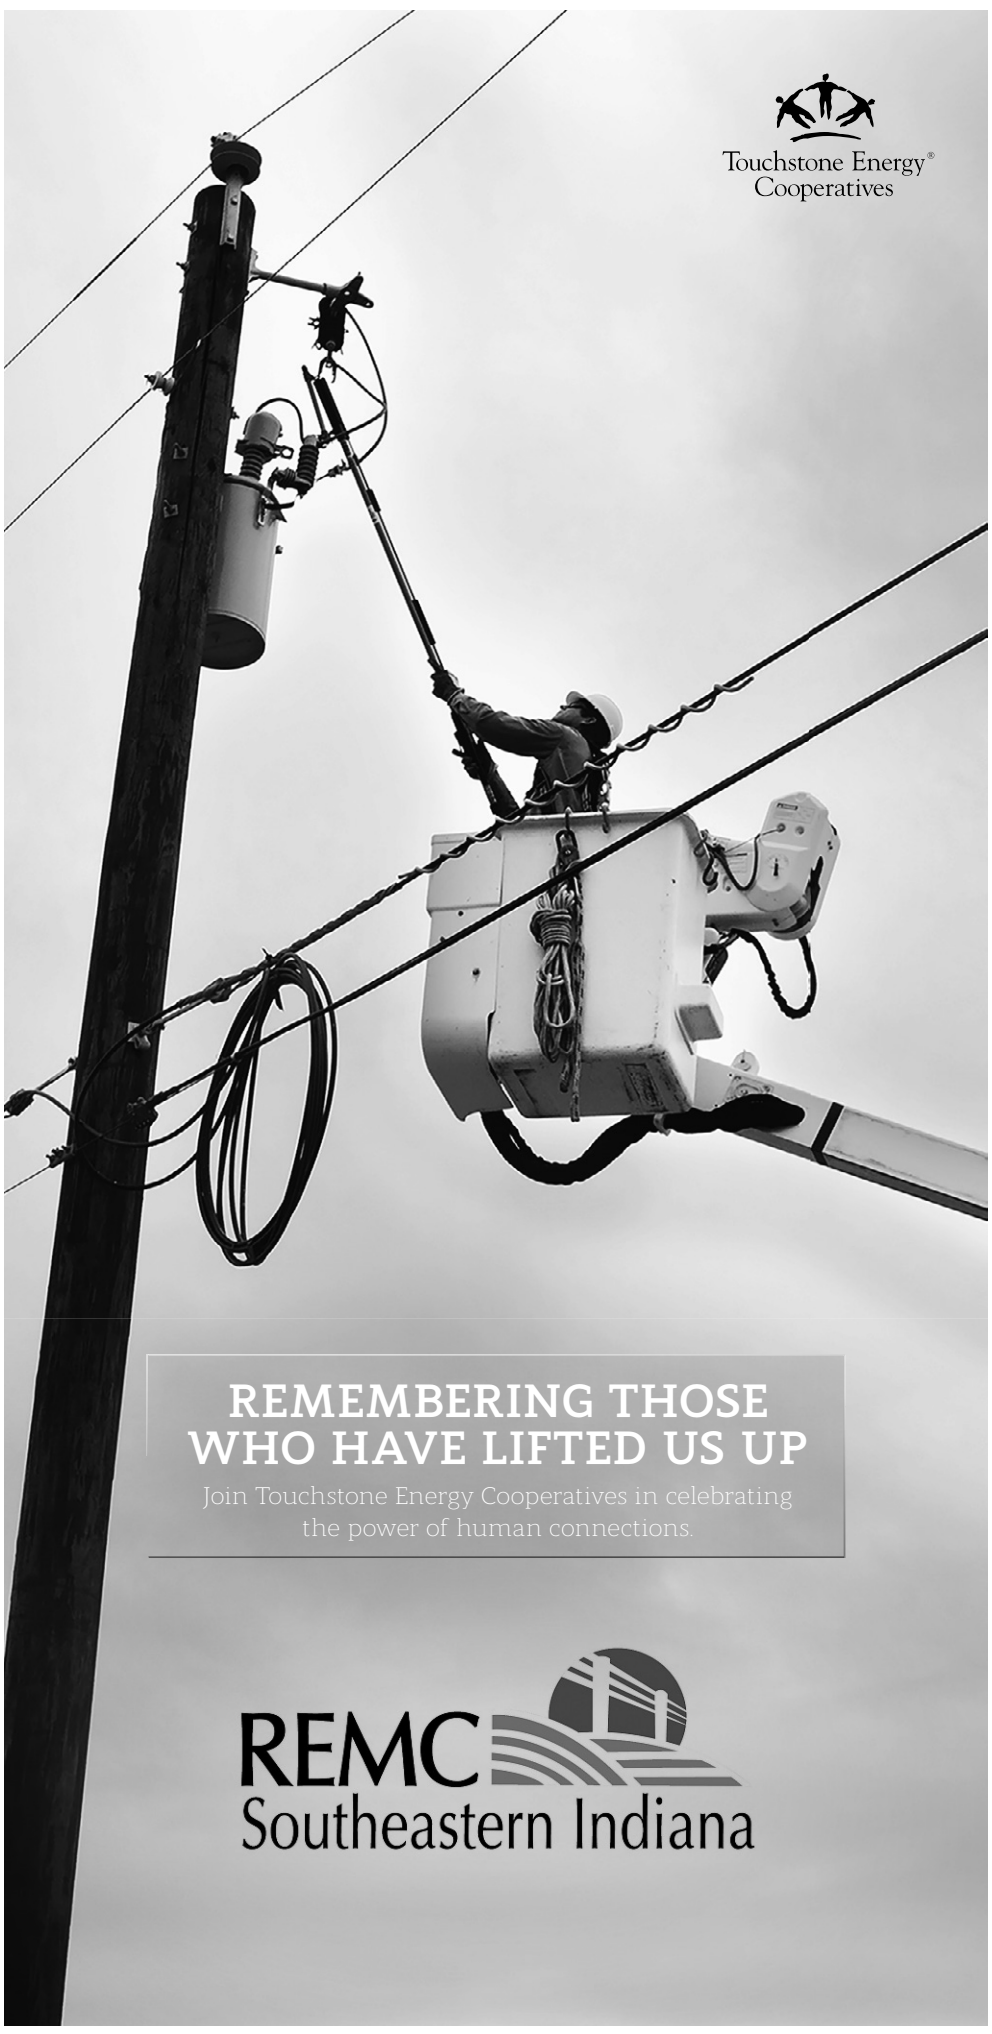
"The good news is we don't lose anyone. The bad news is it was the same old story this game. We had five errors and 13 strikeouts. We struggled all year putting the ball in play," Pawlak said. "We manufactured a run in the first on a great at bat by Hunter. Unfortunately that was it offensively. The effort was there tonight. We just didn't execute. I believe the boys will use the off season to improve their skills and we will be a much better team come next March."

Freshman Zach Gish had a double and classmate Philip Kahn had a single to account for all of Shawe's offense. Kennett (1-7) lasted just a third of an inning and took the loss. Wyatt Nichter pitched the final five and two-thirds and allowed only one earned run but Hilltoppers' errors led to six unearned runs.

Shawe end the season with a 5-17 record but Pawlak expects better outcomes next year.

West Washington, now 11-12 on the season, faced New Washington (5-16) in the championship on Monday night. New Washington defeated Crothersville 20-2 in Friday's first semifinal.



31ST DISTRICT BASEBALL

Penick sets strikeout mark in Trimble win over Gallatin

Raiders capture first tournament game since 2004

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

WARSAW — Gallatin County's only strategy against Trimble County's Dalton Penick was pitch count and even that proved not enough.

Penick put together one of the great pitching performances in school history, striking out 15 batters while allowing just three hits in Trimble's 5-0 win over Gallatin County in the opening round of the 31st District Baseball Tournament in Warsaw on Sunday.

Penick's 15 strikeouts were one shy of Michael Dunaway's school record but the junior was denied a chance to go for the mark after reaching 120 pitches with one out in the sixth to force him from the mound.

While Penick failed to get the single-game record, he did push his season total to 112, breaking Dunaway's record of 98. Dunaway, now a Trimble assistant coach, was on hand to witness the feat.

"He is our ace. He goes out there and throws strikes and leaves it all on the field," Trimble coach Brent Taylor said. "He's a really good player and a huge asset to us. He did it all today."

With Penick dealing on the mound, all Trimble needed was a few runs to secure its first win in district tournament play since 2004. The Raiders, moved to the 29th District with the three Oldham County schools in 2005, just returned to the 31st District this year.

Trimble (8-17) scored what proved to be the only run it would need in the second inning when Dylan Penick reached on a single and later scored on an error. The Raiders finally played add-on in the fifth when Dylan Jennings doubled in a run and Trimble went on to score four times thanks to two Gallatin errors.

The only question from that point was whether Penick would be able to finish the game. The lefty struck out two in the bottom of the fifth and fanned the side in the sixth before entering the seventh with 110 pitches.

He struck out the first batter of the inning for his 15th before giving up a single to Zac Jones. Jones' hit came on Penick's 120th pitch — the maximum limit for high schoolers — forcing him to give up the ball to Jennings in relief. Jennings responded by easily getting the next two outs to end the game.

"Dylan is clutch and he would run through a brick wall if he needed to," Taylor said. "He came in, gave us what we needed and here we are, headed to the semifinals."

Trimble managed only five hits in the game but made the most of every chance it got. Jennings had two hits and scored a run while Cameron Blackaby and Jace Ogburn each had hits. J.T. Wilcoxson did not have a hit but drove in two runs and scored a run.

Trimble advanced to the semifinals where it took on Henry County on Monday at Carroll County. Due to Madison Courier deadlines, coverage of that game will be in Thursday's edition.

The championship game will be today at Carroll County.

Carroll strikes quickly in 11-2 win against Eminence

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Other than a brief hiccup in the fifth inning, Carroll County had its way with Eminence, rolling to an 11-2 win in the opening round of the 31st District Baseball Tournament Saturday in Carrollton.

The Panthers rapped out 13 hits and scored nine runs over the second and third innings to quickly turn the game into a rout. But a two-run fifth inning by the Warriors prevented Carroll from ending the game early on the mercy rule.

Despite that small setback, Carroll coach Mike Willhoite was pleased to open the tourney with a win and was already looking ahead to the semifinals.

"When you can jump out and score six runs in the second inning, it sets the tone for the rest of the game," Willhoite said. "Andrew (Shaw) threw strikes and that's what we encourage, let them put the ball in play. We have a pretty good defense that we have a lot of confidence in. We had a little lull there in the middle innings but we came out with the win and we'll prepare to play Owen County on Monday."

The game was essentially over after the Panthers' six-run outburst in the second. Carroll got RBI singles by Dhane Montgomery, Jacobi Brewer and David Smith in the frame, then added three more runs in the third on RBI singles by Jaxon Hewitt and Shaw for a 9-0 lead.

Eminence (4-16-1) finally broke through with a pair of runs in the fifth to close the gap to 9-2 but Carroll answered with two runs in the bottom of the fifth for the final margin.

The 11-2 lead was more than enough for Shaw, who went the distance on the mound to pick up the win. Shaw (2-3) struck out nine and walked three in seven innings while allowing two unearned runs on three hits. Shaw's performance on the hill could prove pivotal as the Panthers chase a 31st District title.

"We've got a rotation that on paper we were hoping to use in this tournament and Andrew being able to go the whole game allows you more wiggle room with that rotation," Willhoite said. "We can now keep what we consider our No. 1 and No. 2 available for the semifinals and hopefully the finals if we can get there."

Luke Staley was 2-for-4 with a double and an RBI to lead Carroll at the plate while Shaw had two hits, drove in two runs and scored a run.

Landon Isaacs had two hits and scored a run and Brewer had two hits two RBIs and two runs scored.

Carroll, now 16-8 on the season, hosted Owen County on Monday in the 31st District semifinals. Due to Madison Courier deadlines, coverage of that game will be in Thursday's edition.

With a win, the Panthers will advance to the championship game, also at home, today against either Trimble County or Henry County.

31ST DISTRICT SOFTBALL

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Eminence scored six runs over the final two innings then held off a late rally to beat Carroll County 7-6 in the opening round of the 31st District Softball Tournament Saturday in Carrollton.

The Panthers cruised through the first five innings and entered the sixth with a 4-1 lead. Carroll scored two runs in the first on a two-run single by Bailey Mefford and added two more in the second when an error scored Layne Huesman and Shawna McAllister.

Eminence began its comeback with a solo run in the fourth, then collected four hits to score two runs in the sixth to close the gap to 4-3. Three Carroll errors allowed the Warriors to plate four runs in the top of the seventh and seize a 7-4 lead.

Carroll mounted a two-out rally in the seventh that nearly tied the score. Lexy Williams reached on a single and scored on Bailey Stewart's triple to center and Stewart then scored on an error. But that's as close as the Panthers could get while coming up a run short of the comeback.

Carroll out-hit Eminence 8-7 with Stewart and Mefford each collecting two hits. Kamryn Knight, Mallory Noble and Huesman each added hits.

Noble (6-13) pitched well enough to win but was undone by the four errors. Noble allowed just two earned runs on seven hits in seven innings with five strikeouts and four walks.

Eminence (11-16) faced off against Trimble County (23-10) in the semifinals at Carroll County on Monday. Due to Madison Courier deadlines, coverage of that game will be in Thursday's edition. The championship game will be today.

Carroll County ends the season with a 6-13 record.

Madison boys golf fired a 345 to place 10th at the Providence Invitational at Champions Pointe Golf Course on Saturday, a match that served essentially as a regional preview.

Burk Shelly had a 101 in a non-scoring round.

Madison returns to action on Thursday when it travels to Jennings County for its final regular-season match of the season. The Cubs will play the IHSAA Sectional at Sunrise Golf Course in Madison on Monday, June 7.

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Michael Andretti hears the line repeatedly.

Yes, he's led more Indianapolis 500 laps than any driver who never reached victory lane. He also knows it's a title that could have been avoided if the Championship Auto Racing Teams series and the Indy Racing League hadn't parted ways in 1996, splitting American open-wheel racing in two.

For Andretti, it came with a heavy price. He missed five 500s in the prime of his career — five chances to end the dreaded Andretti curse. And he, like so many other drivers, had no choice. The big teams and big sponsors all went to CART and the top drivers followed in a bitter, 12-year divorce that nearly ruined the sport.

"I felt cheated," Andretti said. "I lost five years of winning the race in my prime. It's a disappointing feeling."

Today, the remnants of those forgettable days barely make a ripple in Gasoline Alley.

Friendly drivers revel in laughter and jokes. Series officials are trying to grow the sport. The controversial rule that guaranteed IRL regulars 25 of the 33 starting spots in the 500 ended long ago, and Tony George, who was at the forefront of the split as speedway president, is no longer associated with IndyCar. His family sold Indianapolis Motor Speedway and the series to Roger Penske in January 2020. George did not respond to an interview request.

Unfriended by my husband

Dear Annie: My husband and I met in high school and have been married for 23 years. Before we were married, we broke up several times and dated other people. He joined Facebook last year, at the end of August. He friended an old girlfriend from high school.

I got mad, and he responded by blocking me. I have never felt the need to check his phone, but something didn't seem right, so I gave in. I checked his phone without his permission. I found out about a week after joining Facebook that he had sent a message to someone he used to work with before we were married, and he asked this person if he knew how to get ahold of an ex-girlfriend he had dated at one of those times when we had broken up.

In the message, he told this person he wanted to see this ex-girlfriend and that he really missed her and has never forgotten her.

I am devastated and not sure what to do. I want to confront him. All these years, I thought we had a good marriage. We have two beautiful teenage children. My heart is broken. I need your advice. — Heartbroken

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Heartbroken: Trust is a fundamental pillar in a marriage, and he has broken that. It is understandable that you are devastated. You and your husband desperately need marriage counseling, whether he admits it or not. If he refuses to go, then tell him what you know about his desire for his old girlfriend and ask him why he is so unhappy in your marriage.

Ideally, you can confront him about his text messages with a counselor in the session so there will be a moderator in what is likely to be a heated exchange — with the goal being to get your marriage back on track. He has to stop bullying you by doing things like blocking you on Facebook. You are supposed to be on the same team.

Dear Annie: I wrote this when my mother was alive, and I want to share it with you and your readers. Sad to say, she passed away in 2009. I still miss her.

God took a dash of wisdom and patience, and to this, he added a loving heart. He took the stars from heaven and put a twinkle in your eyes. We call them mothers, but they are really ANGELS in disguise. I love you, Momma. — Sweet and Sassy

Dear Sweet and Sassy: You and the great Abraham Lincoln had the same thought: "All that I am, or ever hope to be, I owe to my angel mother." What a gift it is to have a loving and caring mother. We all recently celebrated Mother's Day, but I like the idea of celebrating our mothers every day.

Trying to mend a mother-daughter relationship

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My relationship with my parents has been strained since their divorce 20 years ago. I speak to my father rarely but communicate regularly with my mother. My mom recently found a boyfriend. I have a new baby and a son with disabilities. My mother offered to watch my children at our house, and with remote learning, I need all the help I can get. She is retired and told me "it was her turn" to spend time with the grandkids.

My issue, now that she is coming to my home daily, is that she arrives and complains about something not being to her liking in my home. I have been quiet now for 10 months, but today, I was overwhelmed and told her, crying, how I was trying my best. Taking care of a baby and trying to work a full-time job while my husband works the early morning shift and 15-hour workdays at least three times a week have left me exhausted. She was furious I didn't leave room for her belongings in my kitchen. This past winter, she said my lazy husband better get off his "rear" and shovel. I run a tight ship, but sometimes, things get messy.

My husband works late. Tonight, when I came home from work, my mother stormed out and told me she had called my mother-in-law to cover and would see me next week. I was a little blown away; after we had argued earlier, she texted me over eight times at work. I told her I couldn't respond because of my boss. She told me that I would regret telling her she was clueless about my situation and that it only takes minutes to pick up her stuff and leave.

I need an outsider's opinion.

We had an extremely volatile relationship when I was younger. I am very sensitive about my mother, and I felt like I was giving her a second chance.

She spent Mother's Day with her boyfriend. Last year, she spent it with her mother, my grandmother, who has dementia and lives in the nursing home. A window visit, mind you.

I've always felt abandoned by both parents in a sense and have trouble in my adult relationships trusting people. I feel like bringing in my mother-in-law was also disrespectful and drama-filled. Any advice? — Parent Problems

Dear Parent Problems: Judging from the actions your mother took toward you, you are missing more than just a mother's helper. You are missing a nurturing, unconditionally loving, understanding and patient mother. It is understandable that you have felt abandoned and have trouble trusting people. My advice to you is to recognize that your mother loved you the best she knew how to love you, and sadly for her and you, that love is very limited. The good news is that you can love differently. Find a good therapist, and talk with him or her about your feelings. Being aware of your shortcomings is more than half the battle toward healing from toxic parents. Please give yourself a break. You sound like you are doing a wonderful job parenting.

Castroneves wins record-tying fourth Indianapolis 500

BY JENNA FRYER
AP AUTO RACING WRITER

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis 500 was meant to mark the return of some sort of normalcy, at least for the marquee sporting events that Americans find so meaningful.

For Helio Castroneves, Indy provided a professional rebirth that pushed him into an elite club that last welcomed a new member 30 years ago. He became just the fourth four-time winner of the Indy 500 on Sunday in front of 135,000 fans at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, easily the largest and loudest sporting event since the start of the pandemic.

The race was postponed to August a year ago and held without spectators for the only time in its 105-year history. Given permission to open 40% of the grandstands this year, the exuberant crowd came in droves and went wild for Castroneves' historic win for the old guys.

Biding his time until the moment was right, the veteran passed 24-year-old Alex Palou with two laps remaining and the frenzied crowd roared its approval. When the Brazilian took the checkered flag, he rushed to the fence for his traditional "Spiderman" climb that belied his 46 years.

Castroneves had been trying since 2009 to join A.J. Foyt, Al Unser Sr. and Rick Mears, his former mentor at Team Penske, as the only four-time winners of "The Greatest Spectacle in Racing." Mears was the last driver to join the club in 1991.

Castroneves became the fourth-oldest winner in Indianapolis 500 history, behind Al Unser (47, 1987), Bobby Unser (47, 1981) and Emerson Fittipaldi (46, 1993).

After climbing down the fence, Castroneves ran nearly a mile down the frontstretch for a victory lap on foot. He pumped his arms in the air and waved to the ecstatic crowd, his explosion of emotional energy stopped every few feet by a flood of rivals who rushed onto the track to congratulate him.

Chris Owens

"I was drawn by the positive energy of everyone. For a long time these people want to see a four-time winner," he said. "I say that because they tell me. Every time we sign the autographs, they are like, 'I've never seen a four-time winner. I want to see it.' That's what probably made me thank all of them because they made this place special."

Almost every member of Team Penske rushed out to meet Castroneves, including former teammate Will Power, who saw the final scoring pylon and had no idea his longtime friend won.

"I was looking up and down 'Who is the 06?' " Power told Castroneves in a victory hug. "You're a legend."

Castroneves spent more than two decades driving for Team Penske and won three Indy 500s with the team. But he was eventually phased over to the sports car program, where he won the IMSA championship last season before Roger Penske shuttered the team and made the business decision to cut Castroneves loose.

Penske, now the owner of the speedway, embraced Castroneves in victory lane. Foyt welcomed the new member to the four-time winners club.

"He deserved it, he worked hard to get it and he finally got it," said Foyt, who was celebrating the 60th anniversary of his first Indy 500 victory. "It wasn't given to him and when someone works as hard as he did, I'm glad it happened for him."

After Castroneves, still the last driver to win consecutive Indianapolis 500s in 2001 and 2002, was cut loose by Penske, he insisted he was not done racing yet.

Michael Shank agreed.

Shank hired Castroneves for the Indy 500 to complement the one-car Meyer Shank Racing team. Maybe Castroneves would have a shot to win, but he'd also boost a team that needed some veteran leadership at one of the most challenging tracks in the world.

SPLIT

Bumping is back and so are the big stars, young and old.

But the survivors, like Andretti and Tony Kanaan, will never forget the tension or ill will that led to the schism that lasted until 2008.

George was at the heart of it, starting the upstart IRL to battle the more established CART teams with their better-known drivers.

In 1996, CART scheduled qualifying for its inaugural U.S. 500 on the same weekend as pole qualifying in Indianapolis.

The series also scheduled its Michigan race to be run the same day as the Indianapolis 500 and used Indy's traditional three-car rows on the starting grid.

So naturally when a 12-car crash took out the entire first row and four of the six fastest cars just as the green flag waved, IRL fans considered it karma. Andretti called it a miserable experience.

CART's credibility took a hit when series officials permitted teams to make repairs or use backup cars when the race restarted. It was never held again on Memorial Day weekend.

Kanaan, the Brazilian who won the 2004 IndyCar championship and the 500 in 2013, remembers how CART drivers responded to Juan Pablo Montoya's dominating 2000 Indy victory when Chip Ganassi became the first team owner to return for the 500.

"We were at Milwaukee the next week and the feeling was kind of like 'Ha, ha, ha, he won one.' But we said: 'We — we won one,' " Kanaan said. "After that, it just was downhill."

"The fact of the matter is we all wanted to be here at Indy," Ganassi added. "Winning that day is what I take from it, and in a lot of ways it was a sad day in IndyCar racing. Thank God it's behind us.'"

Once Ganassi made the initial jump, the game was on. Team Penske came back and won the 500 in 2001 with Helio Castroneves. Andretti returned that year, too.

In 2002, Penske rejoined the series permanently and Ganassi ran one full-time car in the series.

With the big names returning and CART losing its television contract with ESPN/ABC, it was only a matter of time before a winner was declared.

Then in 2003, CART lost its title sponsor, FedEx.

Meanwhile, the march to the IRL continued. Ganassi went to a two-car lineup in 2003 and has run three or more cars in nine of the 13 seasons since reunification in 2008.

Andretti returned with three full-time cars in 2003, a team that consisted of himself, Kanaan and three-time Indy 500 winner Dario Franchitti.

But the dust-ups continued as Indy's 2002 disputed finish illustrated. Race stewards ruled that Paul Tracy, one of Andretti's CART teammates, passed Castroneves with two laps to go after a yellow flag came out. Tracy appealed the decision, claiming the pass came before the yellow. The final decision came in July — for Castroneves.

Tracy still claims he was the actual winner and believes the bad feelings played a part in the ruling.

"It was us against them and them against us at that time, and you had two years in a row where CART guys came over and won the Indianapolis 500," Tracy said. "I don't think they wanted that to happen again so the yellow came out and that was an easy call. Without the yellow ... ."

CART declared bankruptcy following the 2003 season and although Gerald Forsythe, Kevin Kalkhoven and Paul Gentilozzi tried to reprise the series as the Champ Car World Series, it only lasted four years. Champ Car officially folded in February 2008 and the healing began.

"That era was like Democrats and Republicans are now, it was that divided," Tracy said. "A lot of drivers got more chances than when it was just solidly CART, and with 20, 25 seasons behind us, that's probably the only positive to come out of it. It certainly divided the sport in a way that drove fans away to NASCAR."
